WOMAN WELL KNOWN IN SALT LAKE CITY.

Miss Bonnie Le Mar, formerly of Salt Lake but more recently of Butte, Mont. who it is reported has started on a search through Colorado for her kidnaped boy, alleged to have fallen heir to the millions of the Dunsmore family, Brockmore, England, is denounced by her former attorney, F. Van Norman, formerly of Denver, Colo., as an impostor. When Miss Le Mar first gained newspaper notoriety in this city her attorney was her most ardent supperter, claiming that she was an abused individual. Now he takes the prosecution side, and cannot condemn the woman in severe enough language. At that time he said Miss Le Mar was above the average of beauty, and used graphic language in describing who it is reported has started on a

Searching For Her Child.

According to advices from the east Miss Le Mar, who has started on a search through Colorado for her kidnaped hoy, alleged to have fallen heir to the millions of the Dunsmore family of Brockmore, England, is denounced by her former attorney as an impostor.

According to the story the missing hoy was kidnaped from his mother seven years ago, while Roy Dunsmore, his father, was suing Bonnie Le Mar for divorce. Dunsmore, according to the woman's story, was the son of a noble English family. He met Bonnie Le Mar while on a search for health in the mining camps in Colorado, Although the woman was a member of the half-world, the young nobleman is said to have fallen in love with her and married her. Then his family dispersions wned him. A child was born to the union. That a dailed was born to the dinon. That child is the missing boy. Seven years afterward Dunsmore sued for divorce and secured it. Later he died. His last request was that his parents provide for his son. Recently these parents died, and it is allaged by the mother of the boy that their entire estate is left to him.

"The facts are that about a year after her divorce from O'Brien and when matters were getting pretty warm for her in Denver, she went to Cripple Creek to exercise her wiles on the unwary, and it is said she inveigled a "Edward F. Cragin, a promoter of the control of the contr

"Her extreme cruelty to the child led the neighbors to intervene and call in the agents of the Humane society, who took the waif away from her. She then instituted proceedings in the courts to recover possession of the child, but could neither prove its maternity nor that she was a proper person to have his custody, and judgment was rendered in favor of the Humane society, which succeeded in having the child adopted by some reputable family.

"In 1889 or 1890 Bonnie, or Bonevieve Le Mar, as she now calls herself, at that time known as Bonnie O'Brien, a day clerk in Charplot's hotel, one of the colline noted hostelries of Colorado. Before this she had been divorced from a previous husband, had been behind the footlights in a minor part and was notorious as the mistress of a former governor of the state, who threw her raside because of her blackmailing propensities. The name of Bonevieve was an assumed one, a stage name.

"About this time she was arrested by a paramour whom she had victimized. Through the efforts of her counsels he was released on bail by a justice of the peace, who was called up at 4 o'clock in the morning. The case was dropped for want of prosecution, the complaining witness not wishing to have the occurrence made milities.

Cruel to Her Child.

"Edward F. Cragin, a promoter of No. 100 Broadway, whose name has been associated with the organization of the Monarch company, refused to make any statement regarding the present situation. In answer to a question whether the deal had been abandoned and whether the fact that the Majestic company had been able to extricate itself from the difficulties existing last month had anything to do with the change of negotiations, Mr. Cragin said: 'I have nothing to say who took the waif away from her. The eighteenth annual comme ment exercises of All Hallows college vere held last evening in the Salt Lake theatre. A musical programme by the college band and orchestra was given. A violin solo by Arthur Pedersen was repeatedly encored. The exhibition drill by One platoon, company B, was a feature of the programme. The boys went through many of the more difficult evolutions and formations in the manual of arms and aroused applause. went through many of the more difficult evolutions and formations in the manual of arms and aroused applause.

C. C. Goodwin made the commencement address. He advised the boys to seek the most out of life. While money was a good thing and a power for good, it should not be the main aim of life. He urged them in going out from the safe harbor of home influence into the unknown seas of life to remain true to themselves, holding honor, industry and integrity as the rudder of their career, which would again bring them into the safe harbor of an honorable old age and the consciousness of a life well spent.

Robert J. Fope gave the valedictory address. He spoke of the influence of college life on character and of the regret with which all left the halls of their Alma Mater.
